The message and call are urgent from a mother who has lost her child. One year after the death of her daughter Elena, Brooke Desserich says we need to stop having this cancer take our kids.

With games and laughter and ice cream and art, the Wyoming community celebrated the life of Elena with all of her favorite things.

While the day may have been filled with fun and games, the message was serious in the fight against cancer.

Volunteers and donors have raised Tens of thousands of dollars for cancer research for Elena's charity, "The Cure Starts Now"

Graeters has even created a flavor named after Elena—donating a percentage of every scoop of Elena's Blue berry pie ice cream to cancer research.

Elena's father Keith was reluctant, but has accepted the miracle that has grown out his daughters death. He says, "There's so many children without opportunities. If we can do something, then thats all we're looking to do."
